

Pronunciation Made Easy

bridging L1 and L2

Hi !

In the last couple of weeks I've been working on an update of the dictionary. It isn't ready in time for this newsletter, but it will be next month.

What's new? The cover, 50 new words and a list of the regular verbs in the past divided into their three different pronunciations. I hope this will be a very helpful reference for something that isn't always obvious.

The good news about this new version is that I will be sending it for free to everyone who has bought Pron Made Easy. I will notify you in advance.

I recently wrote a blog post titled Simplifying English spelling. I was inspired by a post in the Oxford Dictionaries blog about "spelling changes that would make English easier". Hope you'll read it and leave a comment.

Let me also remind you that my two edtech books in Portuguese, published by Porto Editora,

- NetAprendizagem: A Internet na Educação
- O Email na Sala de Aula

are available for free in .pdf in the Pron Made Easy website (Free books tab).

Though they were published several years ago, many of the projects described are still doable today and in a much more exciting way given the many and diversified Web tools and apps available nowadays. Adapting them to these tools is part of the fun and challenge! Your imagination is the limit. Do take a look!

Hope you will forward this newsletter to friends, colleagues and family. You'll help

Like

Tweet

0

0

Share

me spread the word about the Pron Made Easy dictionary!

And invite them to subscribe the newsletter.

Enjoy pronouncing!

Tereca

Mailing address: teredeca@gmail.com, Parede, Lisbon, 2775, Portugal